

California continues to be a leader in innovative technologies and their applications. Stem cell research and biotechnology initiatives have helped the state to maintain its edge in these areas. The Lieutenant Governor is supportive of policies that ensure California will continue to lead in these areas. He supports continued appropriate levels of investment in our universities and graduate programs, attention to infrastructure and development issues, as well as the maintenance of a regulatory environment of certainty that breeds investor confidence.